COULD YOU LIVE WITHOUT THE INTERNET?

by editor in chief Nicky Cox

MORE than a billion young people across the world don't have the internet.

That fact is holding back global change, says the World Wide Web inventor, Sir Tim Berners-Lee.

In a letter he's written for the web's 32nd birthday today (Friday), Sir Tim is calling for a global push to connect all young people safely to the internet.

Sir Tim's letter echoes a report from UNICEF at the end of last year, which showed two-thirds of the world's school-age children – or 1.3 billion children aged 3 to 17 years old – don't have an internet connection in their homes.

The fear is that this lack of internet access could cost the next generation their futures by isolating them from the world, and keeping education out of reach.

UNICEF says a digital divide means children and young people from the poorest households and countries are missing out. The charity is concerned these children are falling even further behind other children, with very little opportunity to catch up.

Today's letter, published by Sir Tim and Rosemary Leith from the Web Foundation, highlights young leaders who are using digital technology to tackle some of the world's problems – like inequality, COVID-19, environmental issues and other global challenges.

But Rosemary says these opportunities need to be open to all: "If half a generation of young people are unable to use the tools to thrive in a digital world – to learn new skills, run businesses, and build communities – society as a whole will miss out on their talents, ideas and efforts."

Sir Tim is also calling for tech companies and governments to work on ways to protect young people from harms online and make young people's rights and wellbeing a top priority.

IS IT A BIRD? IS IT A PLANE? NO, IT'S A SHIP IN THE SKY!

A PHOTO of what appears to be a flying ship was taken this week.

David Morris took the picture near Falmouth, Cornwall, but is the ship really floating in mid air?

No, it was an illusion, said BBC weather expert David Braine. He said the "superior mirage" took place because of "special atmospheric conditions that bend light".

He said the illusion is common in the Arctic, but appears "very rarely" in the UK during winter.

"Superior mirages occur because of the weather condition known as a temperature inversion, where cold air lies close to the sea with warmer air above it," he explained. "Since cold air is denser [more closely packed] than warm air, it bends light towards the eyes of someone standing on the ground or on the coast, changing how a distant object appears."

FAIRY TALE MUSEUM

A new fairy tale museum is opening in Denmark this year, inspired by the work of Hans Christian Andersen. The famous author wrote more than 100 classic fairy tales, including The Ugly Duckling and The Little Mermaid. The magical museum will re-tell the tales through interactive exhibits, gardens and sound installations.

BLOOMING LOVELY

Dorchester on Thames in Oxfordshire has come up with a unique way to celebrate its annual flower show – it's getting the whole village to join in! Instead of doing things virtually due to coronavirus restrictions, residents are being asked to display flowers outside their houses, decorate their windows and get creative in their gardens. It's hoped the whole place will be blooming for springtime and the Easter weekend.

SNOW WAY!

Snowbi Wan Kenobi, Duck Duck Orange Truck and Plowy McPlowface are among the winners of a naming contest for snow ploughs in the US. An impressive 122,435 votes were placed in the contest. Can you think of any better names for a snow plough?

FOOD BANK CRISIS

One in five schools in the UK has set up a food bank during the pandemic, according to a new survey by YouGov. More than a third of teachers also said their school had delivered food parcels to pupils' homes. The news follows concerns about how the coronavirus has affected families, especially those living in poorer areas.

PANTO IS BACK... OH, YES IT IS!

A panto in summer? That's right, folks! Kings Theatre in Portsmouth is bringing panto season back early. The theatre was forced to cancel lots of its Dick Whittington performances last Christmas due to the pandemic, so organisers have decided to reschedule the dates for July and August instead. Proof that even when the sun shines, there's still festive fun to be had!

MUSEUM IS JAB HUB

This week, the Science Museum in London reopened as an NHS vaccination centre, as part of science's fightback against the coronavirus. The museum, which was closed due to COVID-19, is also building a new coronavirus-focused exhibit to go on display once the museum reopens fully. It's the first national museum to host an NHS vaccination centre.

WEDDING SCANNER

Please put your marriage in the bagging area! A new self-service scanner has been set up in China's Jiangsu Province that allows couples to officially get married. The couple simply scan their ID, input their personal information and have some photos taken. The machine then prints out the marriage certificate and the couple add their fingerprints to make it legal. It takes just 15 minutes!

POP-UP PLAYGROUND

A primary school in Tower Hamlets, East London, is set to turn a road into a 'pop-up' playground for pupils this term. Chisenhale School is taking over the street in front of the building, with a little help from the community, to transform it into a fun outdoor space with plants and drawings. It will be used for play and learning, as well as hosting an arts programme.

UK CENSUS TIME

Households in England and Wales are being asked to complete a special survey this month. Known as the census, the survey happens every ten years, and tells the Government information about families, living situations and work. The answers help organisations decide about things in your area, such as transport, education and healthcare.

MUDDY POTATOES

Tesco has announced plans to sell unwashed potatoes to help cut down on food waste. Potatoes are the UK's single most wasted food in the home, says the charity WRAP. Back in the 1970s, most UK supermarkets and greengrocers sold potatoes with soil on them, which experts say blocks out light and makes the spuds last longer.

BANKSY BREAKOUT

Banksy has confirmed that he is behind the new artwork that has appeared on an old prison wall in Reading. The painting shows a prisoner escaping using bed sheets tied to a typewriter. It was first discovered at the beginning of the month, but the artist has now released a video claiming it as his.

MASKS IN SCHOOLS

THIS week there's been lots of debate around whether you should be wearing face masks while at school. Here's what the Government has been saying.

Government advice is that primary school children don't have to wear a face mask. The Department for Education (DfE) says primary pupils need "to see facial expressions to develop their communication and language skills".

If you're in secondary school in England, the DfE says you should wear a face covering if you're not able to socially distance, for example, in the classroom.

Children's Minister Vicky Ford said that secondary school students should be "strongly encouraged" to wear masks in classrooms, but hasn't made it compulsory, as some pupils could be "anxious and nervous". Another MP has warned that leaving it up to schools to decide could cause chaos.

The Association of School and College Leaders has said it would be much easier for headteachers if the Government could make their guidance on masks "black and white".

In Scotland's secondary schools, face coverings will have to be worn at all times, while in Wales and Northern Ireland, face coverings will have to be worn when students can't be socially distant.

Both primary and secondary schools are likely to be a bit chillier than usual, as the Government has advised that indoor spaces "ventilate", meaning you should open a window or a door, to let fresh air in and stale air out.

And you might want to bring a hat and scarf into school with you, as lessons may be held with all the windows open!

It's thought the sharks glow to protect themselves from attack from below

SCIENTISTS have discovered that three species of deep-water shark can glow in the dark – including the largest known luminous vertebrate.

It's well known that some fish can produce their own light, but marine biologists working near New Zealand were the first to discover that the kitefin shark, blackbelly lanternshark and southern lanternshark were also bioluminescent (able to glow in the dark).

The researchers, from Université Catholique de Louvain in Belgium and New Zealand's National Institute of Water and Atmospheric Research, were most surprised to find that the kitefin shark was luminous, as it can reach sizes of 180cm – making it the largest known luminous vertebrate (creatures with spines).

Seen from below in the dark ocean, fish are silhouetted against the surface of the water. It's thought the sharks glow from below as camouflage to protect them from attack.

YEMEN AID HALVED BY UK

IN this year's Budget (see p10), the Government announced that it is cutting the amount of money it sends to help Yemen each year by 50%.

More than 100 charities, including Oxfam, Save the Children and Care International, have joined forces to ask the Government to reverse the planned cut.

The head of the UN's office for humanitarian affairs said the aid cut would cause many more deaths and damage the UK's reputation. He said the UK has decided to "balance the books on the backs of the starving people of Yemen" ('balance the books' means to add up all the money that a business or country earns and spends).

Some Conservative MPs have demanded a vote on the decision to cut the money spent on aid, but the Government has said it's unlikely that they'll have a chance.

By law, Britain must spend an amount equal to 0.7% of the money made by the UK each year, on foreign aid. In the Budget, that amount is being cut to 0.5%.

A spokesperson for the prime minister said that it was legal to cut the amount of aid because of the coronavirus pandemic.

A ROYAL RUMBLE

PRINCE Harry and Meghan Markle have revealed all in an exclusive interview with US chat show host Oprah Winfrey.

by Hannah Timson

The couple, who stepped down from royal duties earlier this year, are now living in California.

They decided to open up to Oprah about life in the British royal family, and why they felt they needed to leave the UK.

The two-hour interview touched on lots of personal subjects, including racism, mental health and the pressure from the media. The couple also talked about how they were concerned about security for their family.

Prince Harry admitted he has fallen out with his father Prince Charles and his brother Prince William over his decision to start a new life in America. He said he still has a good relationship with his grandmother, the Queen.

As well as touching on more serious things, the couple also shared the news that they are having a baby girl in the summer – a little sister for their son, Archie.

The programme aired in America last weekend, before being shown on ITV in the UK on Monday (8 March). Millions of people tuned in to watch.

As First News went to press, Buckingham Palace hadn't commented on the interview.

● Drones to look for best tides

Scientists will use drones to search for the best offshore sites to use for renewable energy projects. Tidal energy uses the natural rise and fall of the sea to power turbines to create energy. Dr Benjamin Williamson, who is leading the drone project, said: "Measuring the flow speed and movement of water is vital for developing offshore renewable energy. However, gathering these measurements is typically high-cost and high-risk." It's hoped that using drones will save lots of time and money during the search for the sites.

● Flying for food

A pilot's 129km (80-mile) round trip to pick up a beef sandwich has come under fire after a local councillor called his actions a "flagrant abuse" of lockdown rules. Chipping Farm Shop near Preston delivered the sarnie to the pilot, who landed in a nearby field, and posted the video on their social media. The reaction to the video was mixed, with some seeing it as light-hearted fun, while others, including councillor Simon Hore, criticised it for breaking lockdown rules.

A VIDEOGAME creator and entrepreneur has made history after becoming only the 14th person alive to reach the deepest part of the ocean.

Richard Garriott's trip to the depths of the Mariana Trench also makes him the first person in the world to have gone into space, been to the North and South poles, and visited the lowest physical point on the planet.

Having gone so far up, down, north and south, it makes sense that Richard was elected president of the Explorer's Club, which promotes scientific exploration. We wonder where he'll go next!

GLOBAL RECYCLING DAY

Getty

ON Thursday (18 March) it's Global Recycling Day. This year, the Global Recycling Foundation is showcasing unsung #RecyclingHeroes to highlight how recycling can contribute to a greener future for all.

The Global Recycling Foundation says that, each year, recycling saves more than 700 million tonnes in CO<sub>2</sub> emissions, which is projected to increase to a billion tonnes by 2030.

However, more needs to be done. In the UK, Channel 4's Dispatches says that lots of recycled goods are actually being burned. The TV programme claims that, in 2019, 11.6m tonnes of rubbish were incinerated (burned), while 10.9m tonnes was recycled.

Some argue burning is better than dumping in landfill, as burning can be used to create useful energy. However, the UK's 48 incinerators now produce more CO<sub>2</sub> emissions than coal. And with more than a third of household recycling being burned and not reused, you can see why it's important to promote those who are making a difference.

As well as highlighting green businesses and world leaders, the Global Recycling Foundation is celebrating younger people fighting for a greener planet too.

Campaigners like 15-year-old Timoci Naulusala, who gave a speech at the UN when he was just 12, show that you can take action at a young age.

The foundation also applauds the work of 11-year-old Ryan Hickman, who, in America, has collected over 700,000 bottles and cans to be recycled.

To find out how you can celebrate Global Recycling Day, visit globalrecyclingday.com/resources. There are loads of great facts and tips on how you can make a difference.

TURN ON THE SUBTITLES

Getty

SKY Kids is putting subtitles on more than 500 of its kids' TV shows, to help improve reading skills.

The Turn On The Subtitles campaign says that having subtitles on while children watch telly can double the chances of a child becoming good at reading.

The smart but simple idea is now growing with Sky Kids' involvement. Shows like SpongeBob SquarePants, PAW Patrol and The Amazing World of Gumball will have their subtitles turned on.

Lucy Murphy, from Sky, said: "We're delighted to... help improve the literacy skills of thousands of children in the UK and Ireland through something as simple as turning on the subtitles to their favourite shows."

DON'T LOSE YOUR HEAD!

Sayaka Mitoh

SCIENTISTS in Japan have discovered that certain types of sea slug have the ability to remove their head and grow a whole new body!

The incredible talent belongs to two species of sacoglossan sea slug. Researchers at Nara Women's University were shocked at what they saw. Sayaka Mitoh said: "We were surprised to see the head moving just after autotomy."

Autotomy is when a creature can lose part of its body. The most well-known examples are probably the lizards that can 'drop' their tail if threatened, then grow one back later.

That's pretty amazing in itself, but the sea slug's ability is on another level. Once removed, the head can move around on its own. Within a few weeks, it can grow a whole new body, complete with heart and other internal organs.

It's not known why the slugs detach their heads from their body. One reason could be a way of removing a parasite (something harmful that lives on or inside something else).

The sea slugs' other trick is to fuel themselves from the sun, just like plants do, by using bits of algae that they eat.

SWITZERLAND

A poster in favour of the ban

Burka ban
Switzerland has narrowly voted to ban facial coverings (except masks worn for health reasons). The vote was described by politicians and the media as a ban on burkas, although the vote didn't mention burkas or niqabs specifically, and the new rules will also outlaw masks worn by protesters. The Central Council of Muslims said that the vote was a "dark day for the Muslim community". A study by the University of Lucerne in Switzerland found that hardly anyone in the country wears a burka anyway.

ICELAND

Earthquake storm
More than 20,000 earthquakes have been detected in Iceland during the last two weeks. On Sunday 7 March, people were kept awake by almost constant quakes for two hours from 2am. While none have caused serious damage to buildings or hurt anyone, five have been "moderate in size". Some scientists are worried that the spate of quakes could lead to some of Iceland's volcanoes erupting.

RUSSIA

Fake vaccine news
US officials have accused Russia of spreading misinformation and fake news stories about vaccines produced by countries in the West. The US government's Global Engagement Center monitors fake news around the world, and says Russian agencies are running news websites that falsely claim western vaccines have serious side effects and don't work very well. The US says the sites don't have a lot of readers, but other larger organisations in Russia and around the world sometimes share the stories.

Despite Australia being home to some of the most venomous creatures in the world, Australians are twice as likely to end up in hospital due to a bee or wasp sting, than from a spider or snake bite. The Australian Institute of Health and Welfare found that from 2017 to 2018, five in every 100,000 Australians were taken to hospital for bee and wasp stings. Twelve were killed by bees and wasps, compared to seven deaths caused by snakes.

WHY IS IT IMPORTANT?

The current Chancellor, Rishi Sunak, delivered his 2021 Budget speech to Parliament on 3 March. This year's Budget is particularly important because the Government has spent a lot of extra money helping people and businesses during the COVID-19 pandemic. People wanted to know whether the support will continue over the next few months while many businesses remain closed and some people can't work, and whether the Chancellor will increase taxes to pay for the extra spending.

The Chancellor explained that, like most countries in the world, the UK has been badly affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. Over 700,000 people have lost their jobs since last March and the UK economy was 10% smaller in 2020 than it was in 2019 – the biggest fall in 300 years.

Rishi Sunak is the man who announced the 2021 Budget

HOW MUCH MONEY DOES THE GOVERNMENT SPEND?

Over the next year, the Government will collect £820 billion in taxes from people and businesses, and spend £1,053 billion on public services. It's hard to imagine this much money. If you stack £10 notes on their side next to each other, £1 million pounds would make a stack 10m long – the length of a bus. £1 billion would be 10km long, which would take about two hours to walk. £1,053 billion would reach all the way from the UK to Japan!

The Government plans to spend more than it will collect in taxes, so it will need to borrow the rest. The last time the UK borrowed this much money was during World War Two.

The money being spent in the Budget could reach from the UK to Japan!

DID YOU KNOW?

THE Government is spending £5 million helping zoos and aquariums feed and care for animals while they're closed to the public.

BRITAIN'S BUDGET EXPLAINED

EACH year, the Chancellor of the Exchequer makes an announcement on the UK's finances, known as the Budget. Just like you might negotiate how much pocket money you get and decide how to spend it, the Chancellor announces how the Government will collect money from taxes and how much will be spent on public services like schools, hospitals, police and the armed forces.

WHAT WILL THE CHANCELLOR DO THIS YEAR?

The Chancellor explained his plan to help the UK recover from the COVID-19 pandemic:

- 1 The Government will carry on helping businesses and families until September.
- 2 The Chancellor will raise more money from taxes to start paying back the money the Government borrowed. He said that people and businesses who can afford it will be asked to pay more.
- 3 The Chancellor said he wants to start planning for the future by helping businesses reopen safely after lockdown, helping people to learn new skills, creating new jobs in the UK and helping businesses to grow.

WHAT WAS IN THE BUDGET FOR YOUNG PEOPLE?

The Government will spend an extra £700 million helping children catch up on things they missed while schools were closed. Some of the money will be used for summer schools.

The Government will spend extra money on sports, TV and film, theatres and museums, plus a bid to bring the FIFA World Cup to the UK and Ireland in 2030.

France won the 2018 World Cup in Russia. Will the UK host in 2030?

The Chancellor said he wants to improve the environment and announced investment in green energy.

What would you do if you were Chancellor? Think about the things that are most important to you. Maybe you'd spend more money on schools and sports facilities, or use taxes to encourage people to be more environmentally friendly.

TROUBLE FOR MOTHS

A NEW report has found that the population of Britain's larger moth species has dropped by 33% in the last 50 years.

The data was released this week as part of the State of Britain's Larger Moths study from wildlife charity Butterfly Conservation, in partnership with Rothamsted Research and the UK Centre for Ecology & Hydrology. Loss of habitat, changing climate and chemical pollution are just a few of the issues that are putting native moths under threat. Moths play a huge part in ecosystems, and if their numbers drop it will have a knock-on effect for plants, crops and other wildlife species.

It isn't all bad news, though: some species have seen a population boost thanks to warmer temperatures. The Jersey tiger moth (pictured) was once only found in Devon but has slowly spread across southern England and coastal areas in southeast Wales.

MARVELLOUS MUMS

Sikhote-Alin Biosphere Reserve

TIGER mums in far east Russia let their cubs hang around for longer and may even share their territory, says a new study.

Tigers are known for being solitary animals with large territories, but a new study has found that Amur tigers in parts of Russia behave in a slightly different way. Researchers from the Wildlife Conservation Society found that once female Amur tigers have cubs, their home range shrinks by 60%, meaning they stay close to their dens at all times. It takes around 18 months for them to start to use the whole of their territory again, gradually taking their cubs further and further afield as they grow. If the cubs are female, the mother tiger may expand her territory so her daughter can have her own territory, sometimes even sharing or overlapping the mum's territory.

Scientists hope that by understanding tigers and how they use their territory, more can be done to protect them. The full study has been published in the journal Mammal Research.

PLATYPUS REFUGE

CONSERVATIONISTS in Australia are planning to open the world's first platypus refuge in a bid to help save this unusual species from extinction.

Platypus numbers are under extreme pressure after bush fires and drought in Australia, the only place in the world these animals live. The Taronga Conservation Society Australia plans to create a refuge where staff can care for up to 65 platypus at a time during emergencies like bushfires.

It's hoped that by rescuing and rehabilitating platypus who are in need, conservationists will be able to learn more about one of the most unique animals on the planet.

CRUEL CROPPING

LEADING vets from the British Veterinary Association (BVA) are calling on the UK Government to help close loopholes in the law that allows dogs with cropped ears to be brought to the UK.

Ear cropping is where the floppy part of a dog's ear is cut off and the remaining part is attached to a splint to make it stay upright. The cruel practice is only done to make a dog look a certain way and there are no health benefits at all. Ear cropping is already banned in the UK, but people can still buy and import dogs with cropped ears, often not realising what a cruel and painful procedure it is for the animal.

CELEBRATING SHAKESPEARE

IT'S Shakespeare Week next week (15-21 March), and nearly two million primary school children across the country will be celebrating William Shakespeare's life and his brilliant stories. We've got lots of fun activities, challenges, projects, online events and a cool competition to get creative with, whether you're at school or at home.

William Shakespeare had a wonderful way with words, and the way he described the characters in his plays, the plots he created and the settings he imagined can all help us to think about a range of situations and a variety of emotions. This year we'll be using Shakespeare's stories and words to inspire us to be true to ourselves and to support our emotional wellbeing. There are lots of fun activities on the Shakespeare Week website that explore Shakespeare's plays and characters. You can also find out about wellbeing in Shakespeare's times – you'll be surprised at how some things haven't really changed, but glad that some things are really different!

BOILS, PLAGUE SORES AND EMBOSSED CARBUNCLES

How gross can you go? Ever wanted to know more about the revolting remedies that people used to take in Shakespeare's day? Health, wellbeing and medicine were a little different in Tudor times, though you may be surprised to find some interesting similarities. Join our guest curator, Martin Brown, Horrible Histories illustrator, in our online exhibition for a tour of medical mayhem. You can also go behind the scenes and learn some of the techniques in drawing your own Horrible Histories-style cartoon.

ENTER OUR COMPETITION: TO THINE OWN SELF BE TRUE

There's still time to enter our cool competition, and we want you to get creative with the famous quote from Hamlet: This above all, to thine own self be true...

It's not always easy being ourselves and sometimes we're afraid to be who we are in case others judge us. But being true to ourselves is important for our wellbeing and self-esteem. This Shakespeare Week we're inviting you to explore your identity and be proud of yourself!

Show us what this quote means to you, and you could win some fantastic prizes. To get you started, we've asked some of the nation's favourite children's celebrities, including CBeebies' Ben Cajee and children's author Marcia Williams, to share their thoughts.

Check out the details on our competition page at www.shakespeareweek.org.uk/competition. Entries can be in any format; it could be a poster, video clip, song, artwork, poem or a piece of writing – the choice is yours.

Closing date for entries is 31 March. Good luck!

WHAT IS YOUR FAVOURITE SHAKESPEARE QUOTE?

I am going to go with: "This above all, to thine own self be true," as my favourite Shakespeare quote, because it reminds me of the importance for our own wellbeing, of being true to ourselves and respecting other people's right to be true to themselves. Yet another moment when Shakespeare puts a thought into a few short words that has taken me multiple paragraphs and six dolls to say!

MY CREATIVE RESPONSE

Can You Live With Yourself? by Ben Cajee

*This above all, to thine own self be true
When you look in the mirror that person you see is you
Got to be able to walk along with your head held high
And think: "Hey, it's okay – I quite like that guy!"
There are going to be times when things are tough
You'll wake up in the morning and think: "Man, I feel rough!"
When life's got you all caught up in a spin
And you just don't know where to begin
You'll need to speak up, hold faith, stand tall
We're told it's how we bounce back after we fall
So answer me this and tell me no lies
Can you live with yourself, in this world, through those eyes?*

ABOUT MY CREATIVE RESPONSE

"Well, I can't draw, I'm not much of a singer and I am not great at making things with my hands, so I decided to write a poem and then film it," says Ben. "I chose a video as it is the thing I am most used to. I feel it helps me connect directly with an audience. I recorded it at home on my mobile during the lockdown in November."

WHEN HAVE YOU BEEN 'TRUE TO YOURSELF'?

"I really value honesty and truthfulness. It matters to me to be genuine and true in my presenting work across television and radio. Last year, I spoke about issues of equality, tolerance and kindness and these links went viral across social media. Speaking out about these things is a big responsibility (and some people can disagree, and aren't always nice to you), but I felt that it was important to stand up and use my voice and influence. The things I said have been viewed millions of times all over the world and hopefully they've connected with lots of people in different ways."

Ben Cajee

METEOR HITS UK

The fireball was captured on camera by an observer, even though it only lasted six seconds

Ben Stanley

GAZING upwards last week you might have been one of those surprised to see a fireball streaking across the night sky. Was it a phoenix? Was it a plane? No, it was a meteor!

The meteor – or space rock – was travelling at 29,800mph (47,960km/h) and lit up the sky as it burned up on its way to Earth. People who saw it were puzzled. Reports say it got bigger and bigger before bursting into a blaze of sparks. Some people even heard a boom as it passed over. The rare and very brief appearance of such a sight was spotted by a record number of people in the UK. Nearly 800, from Northern Ireland to Land's End, have registered seeing it.

Scientists from the UK Fireball Alliance (UKFall), which is led by staff from the Natural History Museum, say the meteor would have been part of an asteroid orbiting the sun before Earth got in the way. Meteors land regularly, but most end up in the sea or remote areas. Those that become fireballs are much brighter than usual and easier to spot. There were signs that this one broke up as it approached the ground, and fragments have been found in the Winchcombe area of Gloucestershire. These pieces are called meteorites.

Scientists believe that some more of the meteor's fragments might be out there, but say they should not be touched directly because that will leave fingerprints.

Dr Katherine Joy advised that if any more are found they should be photographed where they are, the location noted by phone GPS and then sent to ukmeteornetwork@gmail.com. They can then be picked up using a plastic bag or clean foil.

CLEVER CUTTLIFISH

A STUDY has shown that cuttlefish are clever enough to miss out on a snack to get an even tastier one.

Looking at the eyes of cuttlefish, you get a feeling there is more going on inside than you would expect, and it has been known for some time that they show signs of intelligence. We know they are cunning when hunting prey and use camouflage to completely disappear, but how intelligent are they? Could they pass the 'marshmallow test', designed to show signs of complex problem solving? A team in Cambridge decided to adapt the test to find out.

The test was originally devised for young children to see if they could delay eating one marshmallow if they could get two by waiting. The scientists replaced marshmallows with seafood snacks that were put in glass boxes. The door on the box with the less tasty option opened immediately, but the door on the tastier snack opened a few seconds later. The cuttlefish would hang around at the bottom of the tank until their favourite was released.

Not many animals are able to show such self-control, and the behaviour is usually found among longer-living animals, such as apes and parrots.

SUPER CHARIOT

EXCAVATIONS in Pompeii, Italy, have uncovered a magnificent chariot that would have been the Ferrari of its day!

The Roman chariot, discovered when archaeologists were securing the site from looters, is the finest from that time found in Italy so far. It is highly decorated with Roman gods, goddesses and spirits. It is thought the chariot would have been used for special occasions like festivals or parades and possibly even for weddings.

Pompeii was covered in ash from a huge eruption in 79 AD from the nearby volcano of Vesuvius. The town and many of the people living there were buried. Nearly 2,000 years later it is still revealing its amazing secrets.

WHAT does tea have to do with computers?

Well, a British teashop helped create the very first office computer! Lyons & Co was a catering company best known for its teashops and was a familiar sight on the British high street throughout most of the 20th century. They recognised that computers could be used for business and to keep track of their sales and supplies.

So they developed the Lyons Electronic Office computer (right) to help with ordering, statistics and paying their employees. Better known as LEO I, it was the world's first automated office computer system, transforming office work and kick-starting the British computer industry! # SQUISHY FISHY ROBOT

Li et al./Nature

A SQUISHY robot is being used to get to the very bottom of the deepest part of the sea, the Mariana Trench.

Reaching the ocean depths is hard due to the incredible pressure that the weight of water creates. It is like the weight of an elephant pressing down on your thumb. Now scientists have designed a robot with flapping fins like the Mariana hadal snailfish that lives in the deep sea. The fish has a soft, see-through body and soft bones. The robot, still in development, is being tested in the South China Sea.

14. ENTERTAINMENT

Nickelodeon

IMOGEN FAIRES

GOLDIE'S Oldies is a brand-new comedy about a girl called Goldie who moves in with her grandad and his friends.

● What's Goldie's Oldies about?

It's about my character, Goldie, who moves, with my mum and my older brother Danny, to live with my grandad in London. It's all very exciting until we find out that he is actually already living with some very unique housemates, who end up being called the Oldies. So we have these new housemates and everything that comes with it, which leads to things happening in the house that we need to solve.

● How do you think you'd cope living in a house full of oldies?

During filming I was spending a lot of time with the oldies, so it felt a bit like I lived with them anyway. I think it would kind of be the coolest thing in the world, especially if they were the oldies in the show. It would be interesting because there is such a big difference between generations and the show definitely highlights that! I think I would kind of love it.

● The house has to go without tech for a day, so how would you deal with that in real life?

I think I would go into some sort of rejection mode, my body would shut down and I wouldn't know where I am, who I am or what time it is! In a way it would be kind of a relief, because it is such a big part of our lives that it isn't really a choice any more. The phone is always going to be in our hands, and it's such a habit now that it would be a struggle – and you do see them struggle in the show, even the Oldies.

● Goldie's housemates are definitely unique, but who would be your dream housemates?

Ooh, I think we'd need a range of people. I think Louis Theroux because I just need to hear what he has to say; I just need to talk to him multiple times a day. I feel like Michelle Obama, because she's amazing and because my mum would cry and clap every time she came round, which would be so funny. I feel like I just need to throw it out there and say Beyoncé, because I just can't not say Beyoncé! Any questions like this, I always throw her in, even if it just makes no sense.

JUST SAY YES!

IF you could have a day where your parents said "yes" to everything, what would you ask for? That's what happens to Jenna Ortega's character in the fun new family film Yes Day!

● Yes Day is so much fun to watch, but what was it like to make?

I had the most incredible experience shooting Yes Day and I think that the fun that we had on set definitely translates on the camera. It's not every day you get to go to work and throw water balloons at people or ride rollercoasters, or go to concerts and perform with these incredible, insanely talented artists. Shooting the film was even more fun than you could ever imagine.

● What is your character Katie like?

Katie is 14, she's very independent and I think that she's in a bit of a rush to grow up. She cares for her younger siblings a lot, she's the oldest out of three and they do get on her nerves sometimes. She's the misunderstood teen who, you know, is just waiting for the fast life. I think part of that is unnecessary pressure she puts on herself for being the oldest kid and feeling like she should take more responsibility, and wanting to be allowed to do more adult things.

kind of lost because you're like, wait, it's not good not having my family here. It's cool because I think that you get to see Katie in a position where she's suddenly uncomfortable with the freedom that she's been given, and she kind of struggles navigating her way through that, which I think is relatable.

Netflix

● One of the scenes in the film involves going through a car wash with the window open...

That was not fun! I thought it would be fun – that had definitely crossed my mind, what it would be like to go through the carwash with the windows down. But it's cold, there's soap everywhere, sometimes it gets in your eyes and there's a big blowdryer at the end, which makes you so cold. The water pressure is really tough and very aggressive and you pretty much just feel like a wet dog, so I wouldn't recommend it. But it looks like fun, which is the main thing!

Netflix

● Did you ever feel like that?

I feel that way all the time. I just turned 18 and I was like: "Oh, now I can do a bunch of stuff I wanna do!" But then you're

● You filmed on a rollercoaster too, did that get a bit sickly?

I didn't mind. I know Jennifer Garner thought it was sickly. I loved it; it was cool because we got to stay afterwards and keep riding. I would ride those coasters a million times over!

● There's a scene involving a giant ice cream too. Did you get to eat it for real?

Yes, it was really awesome – the first day! I've eaten a lot in scenes before, so I know how to pace myself, but my little brother [played by Julian Lerner] was not ready for that. When you're offered that much ice cream as an 11-year-old boy, that's pretty exciting. We got towards the end of that scene and we didn't have to act too much, because we were all feeling pretty sick!

● Did your parents ever give you a yes day?

No. I would have loved a yes day. I had never heard of a yes day, so this film opened my eyes and I wish I had known about it sooner! When I was younger, I used to be really into making pillow and blanket forts, so I'd like to make a huge fort using pillows, running through the entire house and even outside!

A CHALLENGE LIKE NO OTHER

FOR Red Nose Day, professional racing driver Billy Monger embarked on a huge triathlon-inspired challenge. The 21-year-old double leg amputee battled the elements – as well as physical and mental exhaustion – as he attempted to walk, cycle, and kayak a staggering 140 miles (225km).

All Images: Comic Relief

DAY 1 POUNDING THE PAVEMENT – 18 MILES FROM THE MILLENNIUM BRIDGE, GATESHEAD, TO DURHAM CATHEDRAL

I didn't sleep brilliantly the night before the start of the challenge. I think it was a mix of excitement and nerves. I knew I needed to get my head down, stay focused and get the job done.

I might be smiling, but I'd had a few issues with my right leg just before this photo was taken. Some days you put your legs on and it feels fine, but then the next day you can struggle to walk even a few steps.

I was blown away by the support I got along the route. Chris Ramsey even came down to the Angel of the North to keep me company for a few miles.

DAY 2 THE BOAT TAKES A BATTERING – 50MPH WINDS HIT THE LAKE DISTRICT AS THE CHALLENGE HANGS IN THE BALANCE

My face shows how disappointed I was for the kayak day to be cancelled. If I had made it out on the lake, I would have spent more time in the water than on the water!

What a difference a day makes. It was still windy and a bit blowy, but I was delighted to finally be out on the water – albeit a day late.

DAY 3 SADDLE SORE – BIG CYCLE DAY FROM THE BULLRING IN BIRMINGHAM TO BLENHEIM PALACE. A MERE 65 MILES!

I've not really ridden a bike since my accident; I really struggled to get the hang of it. Less than six weeks later I was cycling through a busy and very hilly city centre.

I never expected to meet Cheryl, having just cycled up the steepest hill of my life! She came out to surprise me during a much-needed pit stop. Cheryl climbed Mount Kilimanjaro for Red Nose Day in 2009, so we talked about how incredibly tough these challenges are.

DAY 4 THE FINISH LINE IS IN SIGHT – WELL, SORT OF... JUST 50.5 MILES TO GO!

Zoe Ball came down to Brands Hatch to help me kick off the final day of my challenge. Due to the kayaking delays, I had extra laps to do on the bike in order to make up the full 140 miles.

I know every inch of Brands Hatch, but I'm usually racing around it at 120mph in a car. It feels a lot longer when you have to walk it! I was so exhausted and pretty much running on empty when Joel Dommett turned up to cheer me up.

So many people helped me after my accident, which is why I took on this challenge. I wanted to raise as much money as possible to make sure other people can get support if they need it. It was this motivation that kept me going during that last gruelling mile to the chequered flag. I didn't expect to be so emotional at the finish line, but I had physically pushed myself to the absolute limit to get there. This was by far one of the hardest things I have ever done!

To see the highs and lows of Billy's Big Red Nose Day Challenge, and to find out how the money he raises will be helping charities in the UK and overseas, tune in on Thursday 18 March at 9pm on BBC One. Go to comicrelief.com/billy-monger

BECOMING

ADAPTED FOR YOUNGER READERS

MICHELLE Robinson started life sharing a bedroom with her older brother Craig, in their family's upstairs apartment in her great-aunt's house. She would go on to become Michelle Obama, the inspirational First Lady of the United States of America.

Now adapted for readers aged 10+, with new photographs and a new introduction from Michelle Obama herself, this memoir tells a very personal, and completely inspiring, story of how, through hard work and determination, the girl from the South Side of Chicago built an extraordinary life.

A tale of ups and downs, triumphs and failures, this book will take you from the early years – first kiss, first school, first love – to the wonders of the White House, and the moment Mrs Obama shook hands with the Queen of England.

A book to read, share and talk about with the adults in your life, this is a call to action and compassion, and hope for change in uncertain times, in a scary world.

Above all, it is a book to make you think: who are you, and what do you want to become?

A SUPER SWITCH

LAST week, the Nintendo Switch turned four years old. Half home console, half portable games machine, the Switch has proved to be immensely popular. But what's next from Nintendo? Last week, we heard reports that a Nintendo Switch Pro is on the way...

Compared to the new Xbox Series X/S and the PlayStation 5 consoles, the Nintendo Switch has a lot less power.

For a couple of years there have been rumours of a souped-up Nintendo Switch swirling around, but at last there's been some believable news.

A report from respected news organisation Bloomberg says that Nintendo is planning a version of the Switch with a larger, higher definition screen that will be able to show more detail.

Apparently, the screen will be made by Samsung, which makes the popular Galaxy smartphones.

There aren't many more details than that, unfortunately. But we're definitely looking forward to seeing Mario's glorious moustache in more detail than ever before!

THIS YEAR'S BAFTA GAMES AWARDS NOMINEES ARE...

THE nominees for the BAFTA Games Awards 2021 have been announced, and it's looking to be a tough competition! Which games do you want to win?

BEST BRITISH GAME

- Dreams (Media Molecule)
- F1 2020 (Codemasters)
- Fall Guys (Mediatonic)
- RÖKI (Polygon Treehouse)
- Sackboy: A Big Adventure (Sumo Digital)
- The Last Campfire (Hello Games)

BEST FAMILY GAME

- Animal Crossing: New Horizons (Nintendo)
- Astro's Playroom (SIE Japan Studio)
- Dreams (Media Molecule)
- Fall Guys (Mediatonic)
- Minecraft: Dungeons (Mojang Studios)
- Sackboy: A Big Adventure (Sumo Digital)

A BIG WEEK FOR FALL GUYS

ALONG with receiving lots of BAFTA nominations (above), Mediatonic, the company that makes Fall Guys, has been bought by Epic Games!

Epic, which owns and develops Fortnite (PEGI 12), bought Mediatonic in the latest of a series of purchases, which also saw it snap up Psyonix, the maker of Rocket League.

BAKING SPECIAL

REECE'S RECIPES

TOP TIP!

Experiment with different ingredients for different occasions!

Junior Bake Off champion Reece shares another delicious Easter recipe with us. This week it's Easter bark! Don't forget to share pictures of your bakes with us at newsdesk@firstnews.co.uk.

EASTER BARK

Ingredients

- 200g chocolate (any kind you like)
- 100g mini eggs
- sprinkles or other cupcake decorations

Method

1. Melt the chocolate. You can do this in a microwave (30 seconds at a time) or in a bowl over a pan/bowl of boiling water
2. Line a baking tray that has a lip/shallow side with parchment paper
3. Pour the chocolate over your lined baking tray
4. Top with mini eggs and sprinkles of your choice
5. Put in the fridge for 20 minutes to set
6. Once chilled, take the chocolate out of the tray and break into shards and enjoy!

Reece says: "These shards are so easy to make and can be used to decorate cakes, or just to eat on their own!"

If you're inspired by Reece and fancy showing off your baking skills, why not apply for Junior Bake Off 2021? If you're aged between 9 and 15, and can whip up a cool cake or some brilliant biscuits, then this could be your year! To apply, visit junior.take-part.co.uk, but make sure to check with a grown-up first. Entries close on 28 March 2021.

SOPHIE SIMPSON

FIRE ENGINEER TECHNICIAN

SOPHIE uses her science degree to help make buildings safer for residents and firefighters, thanks to her job with the London Fire Brigade (LFB).

WHAT I DO

My role mainly consists of carrying out Building Regulation consultation reviews. This includes reading fire strategies, looking at plans and sometimes reviewing computer simulations of fire scenarios, known as computational fluid dynamics, or CFD. My day can also include project work. As a technician, I get less involved in projects and committees than the engineers do, but I have been included in writing Government consultation responses.

WHAT CAREER I WANTED WHEN I WAS AT SCHOOL

I'm not sure I knew. In Year 6 I said I wanted to be a marine biologist. That could have been because I was a competitive swimmer, or it could have been because three-quarters of the girls in the class said that's what they wanted to be. In secondary school I enjoyed science and maths, so decided to study chemical engineering at university, as I found it interesting but also saw it as a way of keeping my horizons fairly open.

Sophie and her dad, John

HOW I GOT MY JOB

I think competitive sport really helped me. I decided that if I could train with the boys, I could study with them too. When I chose to do chemical engineering, I knew that it was a subject that could open lots of different career paths for me. There are lots of options, from oil and gas, to energy, to working for famous chocolate brands. I think it was my dad who first suggested that I could join the LFB as a fire engineer technician. He was a firefighter in the LFB for 30 years. It was something that definitely interested me, as it was a way to improve the safety of the built environment in London every day. And seeing women, like my head of department and my colleague, already in the role and in leadership positions was an inspiration.

WHAT I LOVE ABOUT MY JOB

The best thing has got to be the wide range of projects I get to work on – every week brings something new, and that keeps things exciting. Also seeing first-hand how the work we do is making the built environment and London safer is definitely up there.

WHAT MESSAGE I'D GIVE TO ANY READERS WHO WANT TO WORK IN SCIENCE

If it's something you enjoy, do it! I wasn't sure what I wanted to be, even when I finished uni, but I knew the subjects I enjoyed. And if you enjoy it, it makes studying and working a much better experience! Also, don't let anyone ever tell you "you can't", or "you won't succeed". A lecturer told me I couldn't balance studying and competitive sports, but I set my mind to proving him wrong and I did!

HAVE baked beans ever looked so tasty?!

Pupils at Frome College in Somerset have been showing off their creative talents as part of the Fine Dining Beans Challenge, which was dreamt up by teacher Emily McMunn. She tasked her Year 9 and 10 students with making a plate of baked beans and toast look unique and professional. Check out some of the tasty entries!

Gil Privett scooped first prize for his amazing swan creation (top left). Ms McMunn told her students that she would donate the winner's height in beans (and tins) to the Frome Food Bank. Gil is 160cm tall, so that works out at about 15 tins!

BOWLED OVER

Sotheby's

A SMALL bowl bought at a garage sale has turned out to be a rare Chinese artifact.

The white and blue porcelain bowl was bought for just $35 (£25) when the owner spotted it in a yard sale in Connecticut, USA.

When the new owner took it to be valued, they discovered it was actually a very rare 15th century piece worth up to $500,000 (£360,000)!

The item is one of only seven such bowls known to exist in the world. Most of the others can be found in museums.

The bowl is now going up for auction on 17 March as part of Sotheby's Auction of Important Chinese Art.

A MESSAGE in a bottle has washed up in the Shetland Islands after 21 years at sea.

Megan Keppie was walking on a beach in Mangaster, when she spotted the bottle and noticed the note inside. It was dated from 17 January 2000 and written in Faroese, a language spoken by people on the Faroe Islands, near Denmark.

Megan shared her exciting find on Facebook and asked if anyone could help her translate it. It turns out the bottle was sent by a Scout group from the town of Klaksvík.

Remarkably, Megan managed to track down the Scout group and find the letter's actual writer, Finn Johannesen, to let them all know she'd discovered it.

THE SKY IS THE LIMIT

MAYA Ghazal, 21, is a Syrian refugee, student, activist and the first female Syrian refugee pilot in the world.

We spoke to Maya about her experience of coming to the UK, how she became a pilot and how it felt this week when she was made a Goodwill Ambassador by the UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency.

“Reading the news, getting educated on what’s happening in the world is great. High five to First News readers!”

● You’ve been made a Goodwill Ambassador for the UNHCR on International Women’s Day. How does that feel?

It’s very exciting! I’m very happy it’s happening – I’ve been working with the UNHCR for five years now. I feel honoured to have a title and the opportunity to speak for refugees using the UNHCR platform. It’s pretty cool! It’s an important issue that touches me personally because I myself had to leave my country.

● Do you remember the first time you worked with the UNHCR?

I do, I took over their Instagram. I told the world about being a refugee, the struggles I faced, how my community helped me and how other people can help too. I did feel I was putting myself out there, but because I used their platform and was supported, it didn’t end up feeling that scary at all. It encouraged me to keep speaking out about my experience.

● What was it like when you arrived in the UK?

Everyone expects an adventure, but because I arrived here on a family-reunion visa as my dad was already here, we just came on the plane! When I arrived, I’d just turned 16, and needed to go to school, but the schools I visited didn’t recognise the exam results I received in Syria. Even though I’d got good grades, they just weren’t accepted. One school completely refused to see me!

● Then you went from not being able to get into a school to studying aviation (flight) engineering at university!

I went to an open day at a college where they told me: “We don’t accept your qualifications, but go and speak to this teacher. It probably won’t lead to anything. But just in case, go and speak to him.” So I went to an engineering teacher and said: “I have no friends. I have nothing to do. I just want to study.” It made my life sound so sad! But I think he saw something in me and offered to help me complete tests in English, maths and science. He gave me a chance. I didn’t always want to study aviation, but after staying at a hotel near Heathrow Airport, where I could see the runway, I just thought it was so cool. I told my mum there and then I wanted to study aviation.

● How did your family react?

My mum thought it was a bit impulsive! But I couldn’t let it go, even though I faced people telling me: “You’re Syrian, you’re Muslim, you’re not even from this country. Do you think you’re going to be working in an airport? It was already hard for you to come to this country!” For a while I thought maybe they’re right, but after a week I was like: no, I want to do this. The whole point of my dad making this journey of coming to the UK was for us to have dreams, and be able to achieve them!

● You’ve faced a lot of disruption in your life. For many First News readers, the pandemic might be the first time they’re experiencing disruption. Do you have any advice for them?

I understand what First News readers are going through. For five years in Syria, we went through a very similar disruption. The pandemic has definitely brought back old memories! My advice is to focus on the future, rather than the present. What would you like to happen in the future? We don’t have much control in these uncertain times, so we have to make the best of what we have. Explore your interests, learn a new skill. Maybe even just spend some time thinking! I think that reading the news, getting educated on what’s happening around the world is great. Honestly, high five to First News readers! Maybe First News readers could read my story, and educate themselves on what it’s like to be a refugee.

“Anybody could be a refugee. It doesn’t mean anything, they’re just human beings, not numbers. They have lives and futures and hopes and dreams”

● What message will you be sharing as a Goodwill Ambassador?

I want to share my story in the hope that people can understand that refugees have potential, and can reach that potential if they are given the chance. I also want to give refugees hope that their dreams for the future can come true! It’s possible for you to achieve your dreams, you just have to believe in yourself. There are over 80 million people in the world who have been forced from their homes; people forget that those people left everything behind, just to look for safety. They’re starting from zero, often in a different country with a different language. You know, anybody could be a refugee. It doesn’t mean anything, they’re just human beings, not numbers. They have lives and futures and hopes and dreams. Just say hi to the new refugee kid at school, you could make their life much better!

BLUE PETER BOOK AWARD WINNERS ANNOUNCED!

ON World Book Day last week, the winners of the annual Blue Peter Book Awards were announced!

The two winning titles were voted for by more than 200 children from 12 schools across the UK, who voted for the Best Story of the year and the Best Book with Facts.

There was a lot of tough competition, but unfortunately there could only be two winners. Taking the prize of Best Story was A Kind of Spark by Elle McNicoll, and winning the Best Book with Facts award was A Day In The Life Of A Poo, A Gnu And You by Mike Barfield and Jess Bradley.

Author Elle McNicoll said: "As someone who grew up watching Blue Peter and discovering brilliant new books from the show, it is an extraordinary moment to be recognised."

Author Mike Barfield said on receiving the award: "Winning any award is a huge honour but winning the Blue Peter Book Award is extra special. The child in me that still persists to this day does find it rather amusing that a book with 'poo' in its title will now have to be mentioned several times on the show."

To find out more about the winning books, head to www.booktrust.org.uk/bluepeter.

Mara the Storyteller

THE British Library is launching a new initiative to celebrate and help promote diversity in children's books.

Launching with submissions by renowned writers, poets, illustrators and storytellers, the library wants to get kids across the UK creating 'concertina books' about themselves.

By making one of these foldable books, the British Library hopes to show that anyone can be the author, illustrator or star of a story.

YOUR READS!

THE CITY OF SECRET RIVERS JACOB SAGER WEINSTEIN

Hyacinth Hayward is a normal girl, or that's what she thought! One day she moves from America to London, and everything is very different. For example, her neighbour isn't her grandma, but some weird old woman called Lady Roslyn. And her gran's letter now switches between saying "you are in grave danger" and "here's a gift".

But most importantly, she finds out you should never mix hot and cold water or your elderly neighbour will have to save London, while you make friends with a talking pig and spot your relatives everywhere! Oh, and your neighbour is trying to murder and steal your mum's blood!

I really enjoyed this book because it's about my home town, London, and its rivers. Strongly recommended if you are interested in learning about a secret side of London.

FEBRUARY CHALLENGE

by pupils from Finton House School

THIRTY-EIGHT pupils from our school pledged to walk and/or run 100km each in February in support of two causes: Breathing Spaces at Great Ormond Street Hospital and Harry's Giant Pledge.

Year 2 pupil Freddie, whose brother Alfie is in Year 5, had drawn a wishing star in art, and wished that their cousin Harry (who died of bone cancer at the age of five) would come back to life.

Barnaby, also in Year 5, and Jamie in Year 1 sadly lost their own brother Rory a few years ago, so four friends, Kieran, Mathilda, Alfie and Barnaby, decided to set themselves a challenge to raise funds for the charities.

We told our friends about it in Class Time over Zoom and before we knew it, loads of our friends pledged to do the same, along with a couple of their younger siblings too.

We had 38 'Fintonians', mainly from Year 5, who all committed to walking or running 100km during February.

Not only are we raising money for two small, but much needed, charities, we are also working as a team to a shared goal, despite not physically being together during lockdown.

Early morning walks before Zoom school lessons, lunchtime runs and after 'home learning' school outings all counted towards our 100km goal.

So far we have raised just over £23,500.

MY BOOK

by Olive Jamieson

I BEGAN my book in the first coronavirus lockdown back in March 2020. It started as a diary.

I was frustrated, because I felt like people didn't understand what it was like for children during the coronavirus pandemic. It was my goal just to put my thoughts down. I felt like I could share my experiences through writing them down, and that made me feel better.

I kept on writing, and my diary turned into a book, The Coronavirus Kids.

It covers my experiences during the pandemic: cancelled plans, missing out on school and being separated from my friends, as well as some other themes, including Donald Trump.

My biggest hope for the book is that it will help people understand how hard it is for kids in coronavirus times, and that it will help alert the Government that it is so much harder than they think for kids not going to school.

I decided to donate all profits from the sale of my book to Ella's Unlocking Freedom charity as charities need more help because of coronavirus.

I chose Ella's because the women they support have been through horrible experiences and they need a lot of support. Like children, their voices are being heard less than others during the pandemic. And their freedoms have been even more limited. I want to raise as much money as possible for Ella's.

The Coronavirus Kids is available to order now on Amazon

SPORT IN NUMBERS

2 titles were won by Alfie Hewett at the World Wheelchair Tennis Tournament in the Netherlands. First, he beat fellow Brit Gordon Reid in two sets in the singles final. Then, Hewett and Reid teamed up for the doubles final, taking just one hour and seven minutes to win 6-1, 6-1.

31 runs not out by Fran Wilson helped England's cricketers secure a 32-run victory over New Zealand, as the tourists won the three-match Twenty20 series 3-0. England are in excellent form, having now won their last 11 completed Twenty20 international games.

6 league losses at home in a row is Liverpool's unwelcome tally. The defending champions' 1-0 defeat to Fulham means that the Reds now have the worst home record this year in England's top four leagues, collecting one point from seven games. Liverpool will be hoping to stop the rot when they host Aston Villa on 10 April.

RANGERS RISE TO THE TOP!

TEN years since last winning the Scottish Premiership, Rangers took the title with six games left to play!

Rangers' 32nd league match of the season was at home against St Mirren, and after 16 minutes the Glasgow side were already 2-0 up, thanks to goals from Ryan Kent and Alfredo Morelos. A third from Ianis Hagi at the start of the second half put the game beyond doubt... but not the title. Although second-placed team Celtic were more than 20 points behind, they could still catch their rivals. However, a goalless draw with Dundee United the following day put paid to those slim chances and Rangers were confirmed as the 2020-2021 champions.

This incredible success marks the end of a difficult decade for the club. After winning the league title in 2010-2011, Rangers saw financial problems replace success on the pitch. Unable to settle its debts, the club had to close down and its assets were sold to another company, which was later renamed Rangers Football Club. Playing its first games in the Third Division, the new team managed to gain promotion back into the Premiership in just four seasons.

In June 2018, Liverpool legend Steven Gerrard was appointed as manager, having only previously managed at under-18 level before. It proved to be a smart move. To claim this season's title, Rangers won 28 games, drew four and lost none, scoring 77 goals and conceding just nine. "I am so proud of the players," said Gerrard. "It has been an incredible journey we have been on and we deserve it."

INSIDE STORIES!

The 2021 Championships were Keely Hodgkinson's first attempt at winning a major title

TEAM GB collected a haul of medals at the European Athletics Indoor Championships.

One impressive performance came from Keely Hodgkinson in the 800m. Leading for most of the race, she crossed the line in two minutes and 3.88 seconds to take gold. Victory meant that the 19-year-old became Britain's youngest European Indoors champion for more than 50 years.

Andrew Pozzi was a contender for the gold medal in the exhilarating men's 60m hurdles. He equalled his personal best time of 7.43 seconds, but took silver, finishing just 0.01 seconds behind Frenchman Wilhem Belocian.

The women's 60m hurdles saw sisters Cindy Sember and Tiffany Porter compete against each other. Favourite Nadine Visser, from the Netherlands, was the winner, while Sember collected silver and Porter came in third for the bronze.

Britain ended this year's competition in third place, with 12 medals. This matched their best ever performance, set at the Glasgow Indoor Championships two years ago.
